At Height Of Butler School Row

Center of the Butler school board fuss which was shifted to Mansfield yesterday was the office of County Prosecutor Harold T. Lutz where school board members, with a delegation of seven men selected by the village, convened for a special meeting during which the board lifted its order suspending Superintendent Willard S. Weekley. The top picture shows Prosecutor Lutz, center, giving board members a few pointers on legal procedure. From left to right, are board member Wade Forbes, Earl Ward, spokesman for the townsfolk; board president Ivan Gower, and members Rupert Roberts and Kinsey Morgan. Below, Ward emphasizes with to Roberts and Morgan with a pointed finger his demand that Weekley be reinstated "without prejudice" and the school reopened.

Butler Quiet Again With Weekley Back

Storm Over Suspension Abates, Board Seeks Legal Authority To Dismiss Affidavit Charging 'Misconduct'.

Quiet returned to Butler today—at least on the surface. After two stormy days, during the course of which the village's centralized school twice was closed following protest demonstrations by the pupils, the school reopened today. All appeared quiet as the pupils, numbering approximately 450, returned to their classes.

Back at his desk, apparently winner of the first round in the tumultuous fight that has developed over an attempt to oust him, was Superintendent Willard S Weekley. And back at his job as music instructor was Paul Millard, who was acting superintendent for a day, but whose only official act was to order the school closed when protesting pupils blocked him when he attempted to enter.

There was this morning no outward indication of any trouble. There was no commotion, no recurrence of the yelling or banner-waving by pupils. There were few adults in the vicinity, and no outbreaks such as that las. Friday when School Board Members Kinsey Morgan and Rupert Boberts were beaten by a group of men.

Weekley was back on the job less than a week after he had been suspended for 10 days by the village school board pending hearing on "misconduct" charges brought against him by 11 residents of the school district.

He was on the job by virtue of the school board's unanimous action yesterday in lifting the suspension. The board met in special session during the course of a hectic day, when the scene shifted from Butler, after the pupils had refused to enter the school for the second day, to the Richland county courthouse at Mansfield.

The board, with some 200 determined townspeople trailing along, met at the courthouse at the call of County Superintendent of Schools Boyd W. Robinson.

Admiral Has Job of Keeping U. S.-Red Relations Good.

WASHINGTON—(U.P.)—Appointment of Admiral William Harrison Standley as the new United States ambassador to the Soviet Union placed new emphasis today on the administration's reliance on high naval officers to handle difficult diplomatic posts.

Standley becomes the second naval figure to assume an ambassadorship, the first being Admiral William D. Leahy, American ambassador to France. Both are former chiefs of naval operations.

Standley is in a difficult position. The relations between this country and the Soviet Union, while improved still require astute handling.

Two of his most important problems will be to lay the groundwork in Russia for an offensive against Japan, and to keep the Russians satisfied with the supply of lend-lease materials they are getting from the United States.

LOSS TO MOUNT

Economist Says State Will Lose $17,000,000—and More.

COLUMBUS—(U.P.)—Automobile and tire rationing will cost Ohio's state and local governments $17,000,000 this year but that's only a fraction of the loss in revenue in coming years if rationing is continued.

Joseph R. Smart, engineer-economist for the Ohio highway planning survey, today predicted a loss of income totaling $58,000,000 by 1945 and $65,000,000 for each year after 1945.

British Fall Back In Last Ditch Battle

London Fears Enemy Has Infiltrated Into City; Radio Blanks Out; Pall Of Smoke Covers Fierce Fight; Foe Pours Troops Over Strait.

(By Associated Press)

Overwhelming masses of Japanese troops swarmed over Singapore island today, forcing British imperial defenders to execute a new withdrawal in what appeared to be the dying hours of the struggle for Britain's last great stronghold in the far Pacific.

Informed quarters in London said it was possible the Japanese had infiltrated into Singapore city itself and attacked the radio station there.

The station suddenly blanked out this morning.

Dispatches from the beleaguered city said that the din of battle intensified after dawn and that a great black pall of smoke hung over the scene of fighting. Japanese planes flew low over Singapore's outskirts, and residents heard the whine of machine-gun bullets.

Artillery rumbled heavily from the west, while the pre-dawn skies were red with the glow of burning oil tanks.

Tokyo dispatches broadcast by the Italian radio said Japanese assault forces had driven within five miles of the downtown heart of Singapore city.

British headquarters acknowledged at 10 p. m. last night (11 a. m., EWT, Monday) that fighting ranged only 10 miles away.

A Berlin broadcast said the Japanese commander, Lieut.-Gen. Tomoyuki Yamashita, sent a message this morning to the British commander-in-chief, Lieut.-Gen. A. E. Percival, demanding the surrender of Singapore.

Bloody fighting still continued, however, with the hard-pressed Australian, British and Indian imperials exacting a terrific toll on the invaders.

Domei, official Japanese news agency, said in front-line dispatches that Japanese engineers had repaired the 3,000-foot Johore strait causeway, which the British had breached and that Japanese troops and supplies were pouring over the span.

There was no disguising the magnitude of the disaster Singapore's fall would inflict on the United Nations. It would:

1. Gravely endanger all Allied bases between the Suez canal, Egypt, and Pearl Harbor, Honolulu.

2. Free Japan's powerful Malayan armies for attacks on Java, Burma and even Australia.

3. Deal a blow to United Nations' manpower in the southwest Pacific, unless, the more than 60,000 British troops now locked in battle on Singapore island could be evacuated—an almost impossible feat.

4 Give Japan a free passage to the Indian ocean and the Bay of Bengal.

Even as Singapore's fateful hour approached, the Japanese invasion hordes were already striking new blows in the Dutch Indies and toward Australia.

A bulletin from N. E. I. headquarters said Japanese troops, launching their sixth attack on a key point in the Indies, had landed in the vicinity of Macassar, chief port on the southwest coast of Celebes island, 500 miles northeast of the big Dutch naval base at Soerabaja, Java.

The thrust was seen an another move toward the expected direct assault on Java itself, wealthiest of the Indies and headquarters of Gen Sir Archibald P. Wavell's United Nations command.

Simultaneously, communications were interrupted between Java and the port of Banjermasin, on the south coast of Dutch Borneo, 350 miles north of Soerabaja. This usually

FURIOUS: Jap Attack Tries To Blast Path Through Luzon

(By United Press)

WASHINGTON—Japanese dive-bombers are furiously attacking Gen. Douglas MacArthur's lines on Batan peninsula in an attempt to blast a path for a "victory drive" against the outnumbered American and Filipino defenders, military officials said today.

Japanese bombers, possibly reinforced during last week's lull in the air wave over the Philippines, were said to be thundering over hour after hour to blast the Batan "fox holes" where MacArthur's men have dug in for the enemy's big push.

The aerial bombardment was said to be designed to "soften up" the U. S lines while Japanese shock troops strike lightning blows for a break-through of the last American resistance on the Island of Luzon.

The enemy's dive-bombers were carrying out their low-swooping attacks against the meager defense being put up by MacArthur's handful of P-40 pursuit planes and the rattling fire of his anti-aircraft guns.

War department officials, studying the latest reports received from MacArthur, said his hour of supreme test seemed to be close at hand, with his troops outnumbered perhaps 10-to-1 due to recent arrivals of Japanese transports in Lingayen gulf and Subic bay above Batan's battleground.

Although a communique yesterday told of "heavy fighting"

FREED: Soviets Liberate 80 Cities In 10-Week Offensive

(By Associated Press)

Russia's armies, driving forward through gale-whipped snowstorms, reported today they had liberated 80 cities and more than 48,000 towns and villages in the past 10 weeks, and declared that the Germans had lost 40,000 men in the Crimean battle of Sevastopol alone.

Soviet dispatches said the Red armies were scoring heavy new gains in the Donets river industrial basin, in the Ukraine, and in the drive against Smolensk, 230 miles west of Moscow.

Adolf Hitler's field headquarters acknowledged the Russians were also smashing in "heavy, massed attacks" against German lines before Leningrad but asserted they had been driven back.

On the North African front, British headquarters reported little change in the situation, with imperial patrols active on a line from Tmimi to El Mechili, 50 miles west of Tobruk.

At sea, the German high command declared Nazi bombers attacking a strongly-protected British convoy ff the Egyptian coast scored hits on a light cruiser, a destroyer and two big transports, inflicting such heavy damage that some were "presumed lost."

The Berlin radio said German U-boats operating in the Atlantic had sunk eight more merchant ships totalling 50,500 tons and a

Fireboats Arrive At Scene As Flames Sweep Normandie

NORMANDIE AT REST IN MUD

Flame-Ravaged Vessel Rolls Over on Side as Tide Sweeps Up Hudson.

(By Associated Press)

NEW YORK — Like a great wounded monster but, somehow, majestic still, the fire-seared and water-logged former French liner Normandie succumbed to the surging tide today and toppled to ignominous rest in Hudson river mud.

Ravaged by flames, a gaping hole cut in her hull in a vain attempt to counteract pressure of the incoming tide, the $60,000,000 vessel rolled over at 2:45 a. m. (EWT) and now lies on her port side in 40 feet of water alongside her pier.

Touched off by sparks from a welder's torch, flames raged through the naval craft for three and a half hours yesterday before they were brought under control by every available piece of land and sea fire fighting equipment in Manhattan.

Two hundred twenty of the 2,200 workmen and naval personnel aboard suffered injuries, and one welder, Frank Trentacosa, 36, died of injuries received when he jumped from deck to pier.

It was ever so gently and with scarcely a noise that the 80,000-ton ship—now the U. S. naval auxiliary LaFayette—dipped her fire-blackened superstructure to the water's surface in surrender.

Only the crunch of ice and a final belch of smoke and flame—quickly extinguished by fireboats—marked her settling.

Hope that she could be salvaged even in her present position and condition was expressed by Rear Admiral Adolphus Andrews, commandant of the third naval district.

"I don't believe the fire was caused by sabotage," Admiral Andrews said. "There was nothing to indicate it."

Bedfast Invalid Accused Of Shooting Farm Hand

Sheriff Says Richland Farmer, In Bed With Broken Back, Wounds Helper Who Has 50-50 Chance To Live.

Lying bedfast in a room where he has been confined for a month with a broken back, Willis Harris, 46-year-old farmer of near Mansfield, today faced a charge of either shooting with intent to wound or murder.

In General hospital here, in only "fair" condition, was James Wilson, 30, who was shot by Harris, according to Sheriff Frank E. Robinson, amid fantastic circumstances yesterday afternoon. Doctors said Wilson was shot through the abdomen, and that peritonitis has set in around the area of the wound. They gave him but a 50-50 chance of survival.

A charge of shooting with intent to wound—or in the event of Wilson's death, a charge of murder, will be filed against Harris, Prosecutor Harold T. Lutz announced. In case of the wounded man's death, Miss Zola Chamberlain, 38, housekeeper at the farm where the shooting took place, will be held as a state witness, Lutz said.

An account of the shooting, revealing the incongruous situation of a victim being wounded by a 38-caliber revolver in the hand of another man confined to his bed by a broken back, was given by Sheriff Robinson following a detailed investigation.

The sheriff quoted Harris as saying he shot Wilson because he "wasn't going to let him (Wilson) go 'over the hill'"—an expression for a parolee leaving the presence of a person to whom he is paroled. Robinson identified Wilson as a parolee from Ohio State Reformatory. There had been no argument and only a brief exchange of Manufacturers from the Mansfield area today studied plans for the production of parts needed for U. S. war machinery which they received from naval engineers and prime contractors who visited Mansfield yesterday in a "war-parts-wanted" caravan.

105 Inspect War Products During Caravan Stop Here

John G. Routzon, secretary-manager of the Mansfield Chamber of Commerce, who handled arrangements for the stop of the caravan which was sponsored by the contract distribution division of the War Production board, said that 105 manufacturers had inspected parts displayed in two large trailers parked in front of the Mansfield-Leland hotel.

Routzon was unable to say whether any contracts had been discussed but stated that dozens of the plant representatives had come away with samples of the needed parts and that they would soon receive blueprints to aid them in preparing estimates on bids for sub-contracts.

One truck contained ordnance parts needed by the Navy while the other displayed parts wanted

NEW TELEPHONE BOOKS GO OUT

Mansfield, Rural Subscribers Receiving Directories With Listings In 3 Columns.

The last reminder of the old manual telephone system which Mansfield discarded last summer went by the boards today when Mansfield and Richland county telephone subscribers received their new telephone books for 1942.

Last year when the transfer was being made from manual to dial operation, the Mansfield Telephone company put out a larger than usual directory to include both types of numbers so Mansfielders confused by the change could still get the proper numbers.

This year, however, the larger book will be retained but instead of only two columns of names on a single page, there will be three. The removal of the old manual numbers will provide space for the third column.

Telephone company officials said that the distribution of books began yesterday and that every telephone subscriber in the city should have a new book by tonight. Rural subscribers will get their books in the mail.

Telephone subscribers will be given an additional 600 listings as the result of new phones installed since the issuance of the old directory last April.

GEN. JOHNSON:

By HUGH S. JOHNSON

WASHINGTON — The question of taxes on excess war profits is a tough one. It becomes apparent that manufacturer A has made a profit of 20 per cent, even 200 per cent, and we are all shocked and angry.

Gen. Johnson.

But did you ever stop to think about the history of that contract? Let's say it is something like the breech block of a minor cannon— a difficult forging and machine job that has to be perfected in every part to measurements of exquisite fineness.

The young officer who brings it in knows all about its design. Perhaps it has 45 separate parts. He discusses price per finished product with several good firms in that business.

Since no one in their industry has had any experience on that kind of thing, they make their best estimates. A's is the lowest bid. He has figured it piece by piece on his experience with things as near like it as he has worked.

The pieces go into the shop and are divided up among the various foremen. Now if there is anything a machine or forge-shop foreman loves to do, it is to show up how little a mere theorist with a drawing board and a wooden model knows about getting a product through the shops.

Each foreman goes to work, simplifying these pieces, adapting them to his equipment and reducing both the number of parts and the number of operations. Such cases are the exception rather than the rule, but there are plenty cases where the number of parts, of operations and the amount of cost has been reduced by less than half—with a better product. The changes are accepted but the contract stands. Sometimes the estimated profit is multiplied.

What are you going to do about that? What are you going to do about profits of other manufacturers who didn't do so well? Cutting costs in that manner is what makes Lieut. General Knudsen a wizard in machine production.

Here is another consideration. In few factories does one contract control the profits of the plant. A plant might reap a harvest on one but if many contracts go sour and he comes out in the red on a year's operation —can you adjudge that proprietor a war profiteer if his luck break was with the government? No, you must look at all circumstances of the operation to reach a rule of fairness.

There is another basic reason why percentage of profit on a single contract is no proper measure at all of "profiteering." I know it isn't done in just the way I am about to describe, but, to simplify a complex subject, I am using that way which is approximately duplicated many, many times monthly in practice.

A man takes a contract to build a complete battleship. Let us call it by a term used in the oil-drilling industry—a "turn-key" contract—that means that he will do all the work and deliver the vessel ready for her trial run in three years.

When you look at his books you find that he made a profit of 10 per cent on the contract price—and hell begins to pop. The figure runs to millions.

But here is another much smaller manufacturer — forging and stamping parts of the steel carriage of a pistol for $1.80. Look at his books and his profit turns out to be nine cents each or 5 per cent on the contract price—just and patriotic citizen that he is.

But look a little further. It took a month's time to run his product through the mill—not three years. He made 60 per cent per annum on the contract price or 360 per cent figured on the same basis as the ship.

Finally, the percentage of profit to investment is the only reasonable gauge and even that is not easy. You can't figure "excess" profits on war profiteering on any easy formula. When you are converting of changing over a whole industry to make something it never made before, there is no method applicable to all.

CONFRONT FLIER WITH EVIDENCE IN SPY TRIAL

Brief Cases Produced To Show Laura Ingalls Aided Hitler.

(By United Press)

WASHINGTON—Laura Ingalls' own words and belongings were arrayed against her today in support of the government's charge that as a paid German agent she attempted to soften this country "to receive Adolf Hitler."

The 38-year-old aviatrix, holder of numerous records, is accused of wilful failure to register as a German agent with the state department. She faces a maximum penalty if convicted of eight to 24 months in prison and a $1,000 fine.

Two prosecution witnesses testified yesterday before District Court Justice James W. Morris and a jury of 10 men and two women that the diminutive flyer denounced this country's government in conversations with them and praised Hitler's.

Agents of the federal bureau of investigation produced brief cases filled with documentary evidence found in apartments where she had been a guest. In one briefcase, which defense counsel stipulated was hers, investigators found a translation of Hitler's "Mein Kampf" with many passages underlined in red ink and others marked by strips of paper inserted between the leaves.

James F. Reilly, defense counsel, admitted in his opening statement that Miss Ingalls had accepted a total of $400 in payments from Baron Ulrich Von Glenanth, then second secretary of the German embassy here, but insisted that her only intent had been "to serve her country."

Reilly said the flyer tried three times, twice since the European war started, to get a job as an FBI operative, but was rejected.

Dr. I. Daniel Shorell of New York, a prosecution witness, described Miss Ingalls as "a little bit of a crackpot," and her attorney characterized her as a woman with "a tremendous amount of egotism."

SEES VICHY AIDING AXIS IN LIBYA WAR

Government Finds Reply on Sending Supplies to Rommel Unsatisfactory.

(By International News Service)

WASHINGTON — The United States government, it was learned on high authority today, has decided to stiffen its attitude toward France as a result of definite indications that the Vichy regime has been directly or indirectly aiding the Axis forces in Libya.

This government, responsible quarters disclosed, considers entirely unsatisfactory the Vichy reply to American inquiries concerning reported French aid to the Axis, including the shipment of army trucks and food supplies to the Libyan forces of German Field Marshal Rommel.

Under Secretary of State Sumner Welles intends to discuss the situation with French Ambassador Gaston Henry-Haye late this afternoon. There is reason to believe Welles will call the French envoy sharply to task for what is regarded in American quarters as lack of good faith on the part of Vichy in aiding the Axis forces in Africa.

Unless Vichy ceases this aid to the Axis, there is a strong likelihood the United States will suspend the recently resumed trade relations with French North Africa.

Considerable pessimism is now evident in American quarters concerning the situation in Vichy. It is feared that the group around Marshal Henri Petain which favors close collaborations with Germany may be gaining the upper hand.

Japanese successes in the Far East and the British reverses in Libya are believed to be encouraging to the pro-Axis group in Vichy to press Marshal Petain for closer collaboration with the Nazis.

This group appears to be thinking that Japan may be able to keep the United States sufficiently engaged in the Pacific to enable an Axis victory in Europe before American help can be made effective enough to turn the tide in the European theater.

Some concern is felt here as to whether Marshal Petain will be able to control this pro-Axis element in Vichy much longer.

TELLS FOREMEN OF 'TWO LIVES'

Speaker Says We Must Live Normal and Abnormal Ones In These Days of War.

The stress and tenseness of war times need not make us forget the fine things of life that will live long after the war is over and help to re-build the world. Fay Le Meadows, widely known Ohio minister and lecturer, said last night in a talk before the Mansfield-Shelby Foremen's club at the Mansfield-Leland hotel.

Le Meadows spoke at the club's annual ladies' night party and a meeting at which past presidents of the club were honored.

"Men and women must learn to live two lives in these times —an abnormal life to match the times and a normal one that will help to create a new world out of the one that will be destroyed," he said.

"There is no place for a defeatist in the modern plan," he asserted. "We have talked too much of what the world is doing to us and not enough of what we can do to the world."

The first president of the club, C. L. VanDerau, works manager at the Westinghouse plant, told of the founding of the organization as the Mansfield City Foremen's club 17 years ago this month.

Seven other past presidents of the organization were introduced by P. M. Wooden, head of the club, who presided.

Nels Blocker's orchestra played for dancing after the dinner meeting. More than 200 club members and guests attended.

MRS. D. O. MEESE TO DIRECT NEW CIVIC MUSIC MEMBER CAMPAIGN

Mrs. D. Osborne Meese, active in many other Mansfield organizations, will head the annual Civic Music membership campaign which opens in April, it was announced today.

Mrs. Meese was named membership chairman at a meeting of the association's executive committee last night at the home of Mrs. E. D. Gibson, 284 West Fourth street. She will succeed Mrs. Paul F. Cropper, who has headed the membership campaign for the last four years.

This year's campaign, like those in the past, will cover a period of a week, starting April 20. Next year will be Mansfield's sixth as a member of the Civic Music association. This year's membership was 1150, largest in the history of the organization in Mansfield.

Meeting with the executive committee last night was Mrs. Mercedes Walker, national Civic Music representative, who stressed the importance of high class musical entertainment in civilian morale during war times.

She reported that of 50 other Civic Music membership campaigns over the country since the start of the war, 47 have resulted in increased memberships while the other three held their ground without a loss.

Executive committee members also were informed that Canton, Lima, Sandusky and Findlay, neighboring Ohio cities which have had Civic Music concert series, have decided to continue this year.

Two more concerts remain on the current 1941-42 series of four. They are Alexander Brailowsky, pianist, and the operatic stars, Dusalina Giannini and Giovanni Martinelli, in joint recital. Brailowsky will appear here Feb. 17 and Giannini and Martinelli on March 27.

Watch Posted At Service Stations After Disturbance

CLEVELAND — (INS) — Police maintained a close watch today on independent and company gasoline stations to prevent a wave of blockades and disturbances such as broke last night when some stations refused to observe a 7 p. m. to 7 a. m. curfew placed in effect yesterday.

Police squad cars were called to disperse a gang of men and 20 automobiles that blocked entrances to Grams Friendly Service station when the owner, Fred Grams, refused to close his station at 7 p. m. Grams told police he would continue to keep open if other stations in his section were allowed to continue doing business after the designated closing hour.

A Standard Oil station was blocked by about 65 men and several cars and police had to break up the blockade.

Feeling ran high in other sections and several dealers were menaced by crowds of men as an estimated 925 independent dealers observed the curfew.

Police Checking Columbus 'Lead' In Tire Thefts

The arrest and charging of seven suspects in a "hot tire" ring at Columbus last night was viewed by Mansfield police today as a possible lead in connection with the wave of auto tire and wheel thefts which has persisted in Mansfield for several months.

With about 15 tires and wheels already stolen this year and 80 taken in 1941, Police Chief Thomas M. Bell said that his department would contact Columbus police and would probably send representatives to that city to question the suspects.

Columbus police arrested J. L. H. Hartshorn, 21, Columbus, and four juvenile boys who were charged with auto theft. Roy Jordan, 32, and Seymour Grundstein, 31, both of Columbus, were charged with receiving and concealing stolen property.

Grundstein operates an auto wrecking business with Jordan as a mechanic. Police charge that Hartshorn and the boys stole cars and brought them to Grundstein's where Jordan allegedly substituted old wheels, tires, and tubes for the car's good equipment, the boys being paid by Grundstein.

Mansfield police have been investigating the auto tire and wheel thefts since last summer when they increased at a rapid rate. No arrests have been locally made for the thefts in this city.

"Oh, Hans, here comes Mrs. Gibson's sleds in, empty again!"

BROADWAY

Speaking For Myself.

AMONG the persons I would least expect to meet in a chi-chi, crepe de chine supper club, Clifford Odets—that old stalwart of the Group theater and caresser of the downtrodden, underprivileged and over-persecuted — would be my choice for "most likely to be absent."

Kilgallen

And yet of recent evenings at the Ruban Bleu and 1-2-3, modest little meccas of the chic clique, I have seen. Odets enjoying himself right out in the open.

At the 1-2-3 he exchanged eyelifters with Tallulah Bankhead, who introduced him to the proprietor as "my writer." And he seemed quite comfy in the super-capitalistic surroundings

Now I'm not censoring or even teasing Mr. Odets, understand. Mr. Odets is his own boss and big enough to know what he wants and I'd never think of raising a finger to stop him, but what goes? Is he having a change of heart about the upper crust? Or is he merely nibbling on it to absorb some of its vices and then transcribe them with fury to the printed page? I wouldn't know, but I see some light-hearted puns coming as Clifford puts down his glass by night.

Can't you envision some prankish midnighter coming over to his table and saying in the spirit of fun: "Odets, where is thy stinger?"

It seems to me there are better ways of correcting the mistakes of burlesque theaters than closing their doors abruptly and throwing hundreds of people out of work, as Commissioner Moss did last week.

I am not going on record in favor of burlesque; it is my idea of anti-entertainment and it has always seemed to me a sad and sordid way of making a living. But somebody must like it —notably, I would say, the soldiers and sailors of our own armed forces, judging from a glance at the number of uniforms in any burlesque show audience. So somebody is entertained by it and certainly a lot of people work at it, and I think the glaring evils in the medium could be eliminated swiftly without going to the drastic point of throwing hundreds of people out of jobs in times like these.

Uncertain Destiny + + + + + +

CHAPTER XXX

Linda managed a shaky laugh. "I was only thinking. I'm sorry. What are you saying?"

"I said I have obtained reservations for you on a train leaving for Nevada tomorrow night, and accommodations on a fine ranch near Reno.

She took the sealed envelope he held out to her, and listened as the man said gravely: "As to the matter of a settlement, Mr. Baridon has been most generous." He named a figure so high that Linda gasped in amazement. She had never expected anything to compare with the amount of money Steve intended her to have, and when she protested, the attorney reprimanded her severely.

"It has all been arranged," he said frowning, "as Mr. Baridon wished it. If you feel the amount is insufficient for your needs, you must see Mr. Baridon yourself."

Linda bit her lip to suppress a sudden smile. Insufficient indeed! She wondered what the attorney would say if he knew she was protesting that the amount was too great instead of too little. When she said nothing aloud, the man handed her a substantial check, saying, "Mr. Baridon asked me to give you this to cover your expenses for the next two months. As to the manner in which you will receive your alimony—"

"Please!" Linda's voice sounded strangely as she jumped to her feet. She thought wildly, "I can't bear any more of this. I won't let this stranger talk to me so calmly about my life—as though nothing makes any difference now!"

Aloud, she said, "I—I'm rather in a hurry now. I'll come back some other time to go over the details with you—perhaps this afternoon or tomorrow morning."

She turned and walked rapidly out of the door. The lawyer stared after her in consternation. What an odd young lady, he thought, to walk out when he had reached the plans that interested most women so much . . .

Linda rode back to the apartment with tears coursing down her cheeks. She had resolved never to weep again, never to think of Steve again, but now she realized this was impossible. Wherever she went, whatever she did, the memory of the man she loved would travel with her—constantly reminding her of what might have been.

When she entered the apartment, Ellen was waiting with a message that Diane had called several times, and seemed—in the maid's words—"Quite upset."

Linda smiled grimly, knowing that by now Diane would have heard about the startling announcement made the evening before. Smiling ironically, she dialed Diane's number . . .

"My dear friend Brenda just called to tell me the glad tidings," were Diane's first words. "Linda—is it true?"

"Absolutely," Linda said bitterly. "I just got back from seeing Steve's lawyer—by request."

"Oh," Diane gasped. "Then—you—you've seen Steve?"

"Of course not," she replied irritably. "I received a letter from his attorney this morning asking me to call at the office, and I did. They—they've asked me to go to Reno."

"And—you're going?"

"Naturally. It's a case of 'here's your hat, what's your hurry'."

"Linda, I don't want you to go. Somehow I have a feeling that if you went to Steve and made a clean breast of everything—"

"Save your words, darling," Linda advised lightly. Her voice was lilting, gay. Diane must never know what an effort it cost her to say gaily, "This time tomorrow night I'll be on my way—Reno-way, to life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness!"

Diane ignored Linda's flippancy. Hesitantly, she said, "I—I'd like to drive out to the farm this afternoon Linda, if you're going. I suppose you have some things out there you'll want to pick up, since you'll never see Hillsacres again."

Never see Hillsacres again? Linda had forgotten the rambling farmhouse—the spacious countryside where she had been happy without realizing the reason for her happiness. She had a great desire to see the farm one last time.

"I'll ask Greg to drive us there," she said. "Is that all right with you?"

Diane's voice sounded relieved. "Perfectly all right. What time?"

"One o'clock ought to be all right." Linda answered. "Wear riding clothes if you want to join me in one last ride before I leave."

Driving with Greg and Diane in the crisp, autumn afternoon, Linda tried to forget her despondency—to be gay and amusing—but her efforts were in vain. She was aware that Diane seemed unusually alert. Again and again she glanced at her wrist watch, and each passing car seemed to hold her attention until Greg said sharply, "What's the matter, Diane? You seem upset about something."

Diane's face had an expression of guilt, but she managed a shaky laugh. "I'm just embarrassed at our little threesome, I guess. It's like a moving picture triangle. Girl loves boy—I guess that means me, but boy loves another girl, meaning you, Linda and girl—"

"We're nearly there," Linda said hastily. She was afraid of Diane's next words.

"Greg, you're an angel to bring me out here."

He grinned down at her. "Your wish is my command."

"Very poetic, darling."

He swung the car into the driveway, and Linda glanced curiously at Diane, for the artist was straining forward, anxiously. A moment later Linda's color drained from her face. She, too, had seen the reason for Diane's sudden anxiety. There, parked in the drive before the house was Steve's cream-colored convertible.

"I—I thought Steve was in New York!" Linda said, anguished; then a glance at Diane's relieved face affirmed her suspicions that the other girl had known Steve was back from the east. "Diane—" she began accusingly.

"Can you imagine that!" Diane made a poor attempt at expressing surprise. "We have company." She jumped from the car, pulling Linda after her, and after a moment Greg shrugged indifferently and joined them. As they rounded the house and went in the direction of the stables, they came upon Steve, astride the horse Patricia. He stared at Diane, almost reproachfully, and then his eyes came to rest on Linda. Linda's heart beat madly; her breath came in short gasps. She had tried unsuccessfully to forget Steve and now, seeing him again, was torture. For a moment, oblivious of the others, she looked up at him, seeing how tired he appeared. How strained.

"Good afternoon," he said civilly. "To whom do I owe the pleasure for this unexpected call?"

Linda was confused. He was looking steadily at Diane, and Linda cried out suddenly, "We—we came for one last ride before you send the horses south and I—"

Steve waved his arm in the direction of the stables. "By all means help yourself," he said, and when Linda started after the others, he called to her.

"Yes?" She scolded herself for a sudden thrill at the sound of his voice speaking her name.

"I suppose you saw Jenkins, my lawyer, this morning?"

Linda's hopes died slowly. "Yes, Steve. You—you've been very generous." She did not tell him that she would never accept the settlement; that she had never had any intention of so doing.

"I suppose," he said, as Diane and Greg appeared with Rusty and Fanfare, "you'll want Cavalier?"

For a moment Linda hesitated. She was used to the big, white horse and it was her intention to ride him, but with a reckless impulse she tossed her head:

"I'm afraid Cavalier is a trifle slow," she smiled. "I'm riding Challenger today."

Steve's face mirrored surprise and concern. "Challenger! But you've never ridden him, Linda. He's dangerous and even Mary never risks it."

Linda hesitated for a moment. She had great respect for Steve's judgment, knowing he spoke the truth about Challenger. He was an exhibition horse, proud, nervous. She always had been afraid of him. Then she laughed cooly and entered the stables.

"Bring out Challenger," she ordered the stable boy, and when he stared amazed, she repeated the command impatiently. Her heart pounded as the boy helped her into the saddle, but she tried to conquer her fear. It would never do for Challenger to realiez his rider was afraid. Instead, she walked him out to the clearing and said lightly to Steve: "Your man-eating horse seems quite subdued."

Steve whirled about angrily. "Don't say I didn't warn you, Linda, if he suddenly bolts. He's dynamite and it takes an expert rider to hold him down."

"Meaning what?" she demanded.

They stared frigidly at each other, not speaking until Diane, who had been watching the scene from a vantage point, rode up beside Steve.

"Come along," she ordered anxiously. "This is no time to quibble. Steve, ride along with us and make it a foresome."

Linda was startled. She had a guilty feeling that Diane had planned this very arrangement, but she expected Steve's refusal.

"Thanks," Steve said curtly. "I will."

The little procession started off, and automatically Linda reined her horse in beside Steve, her eyes fixed on a distant point. She heard Diane and Greg engaged in a humorous conversation up ahead and groped for some witty remark to make to her companion, something that would let him know how completely indifferent she was.

"Patrician seems in fine form today." She eyed Steve's chestnut mare.

Steve, patting the horse's shining flank. "I wish you were riding her instead of that skittish stallion. Challenger is a man's horse."

AN INDEPENDENT NEWSPAPER

MANSFIELD, OHIO, TUESDAY, FEBRUARY 10, 1942.

Dictators say they will "hang together." Oh, very well, if they prefer it that way.

With Washington so overcrowded it would appear that Granville may still have adequate space for Charley West.

Except for brief opening remarks, Donald Nelson has had little to say—which is a good indication that he is the right man for the job he is doing.

Carelessness Also Helps Axis

DESTRUCTION of the great ocean liner, the Normandie, would be a serious loss at any time but it is even more severe now, when ships of all kinds are so necessary to transportation of military forces and equipment.

Insofar as the favorable results to the Axis powers are concerned, it makes little difference whether loss of the Normandie was caused by an act of sabotage or the carelessness of a workman handling a blow torch.

While it is gratifying to learn that early investigation leads to the conclusion that there was no sabotage in connection with the destruction of the $60,000,000 liner, this occurrence serves to emphasize the fact that carelessness and incompetence on the part of workmen can be just as costly in results as the criminal acts of enemies.

In addition to the property loss involved in the burning of the Normandie, and consequent reduction of troop transportation facilities, many injuries resulted and 2,000 lives were placed in jeopardy.

Under ordinary conditions such acts of carelessness on the part of workmen are excused by explaining that "Everybody makes mistakes," but if such costly mistakes are to be made frequently in connection with the nation's war production efforts, because of untrained persons being placed in positions of great responsibility, the Axis powers need not be greatly concerned about promoting sabotage in this country—lightly excused carelessness will serve their purpose equally well.

One Town's Sad Awakening

NOT UNTIL an accident killed four youths in a New York state town did the community awaken to the danger of letting children loose with cars, and with money to spend in barrooms. The town's P. T. A. is now calling a mass meeting in its high school to discuss these perils and to try to find ways to prevent them.

The chances are that most of the boys who go gallivanting about with old cars and think it smart to drink too much haven't enough suitable entertainment provided by their homes or the community.

There is a time in practically every normal boy's life when he just has to blow off steam and show how smart he is. It takes a wise parent to keep ahead of him, an understanding community to provide competition in ways that build a boy's strength instead of letting him slide into ways which drag him down. Community activities in sports, plays and making things, all help.

The automobile menace will probably grow less with the rationing of gas and rubber, but this will be only temporary and will be increased a little later. Now's the time to get boys and girls started on really satisfying kinds of safe and sane activity. They will make their own fun if they have half a chance. Moreover, given that chance, normal young people soon set their standards of good times so high that they regard drinking and crazy driving as beneath contempt and as outmoded as model T.

Billion Dollars Is Worth Saving

THE JOINT COMMITTEE on reduction of non-essential expenditures, of which Senator Byrd is chairman, has made its preliminary report to the president and congress. That report is of great importance to all the people.

The committee shows where cash savings of more than $1,300,000,000 can be made in non-defense federal spending during the fiscal year which will begin July 1. It also recommends additional legislative action for savings which would bring the total cut in non-defense spending to almost $1,717,000,000. And this is only its first report—it will make further reports and show where still more retrenchment is practical and possible.

The Brookings Institution has also made an itemized survey which indicates possible savings in excess of $2,000,000,000. It too expects to make further reports to show where additional cuts can and must be made.

One paragraph of the joint committee's report should be studied and acted upon by every public official. That paragraph says: "There is no room for non-essentials in a government stripped for action. Our united purpose is to produce sufficient armament and trained personnel to win this war. Nothing can be permitted to interfere with this objective. The American people are being asked to pay extremely burdensome taxes which will become greater; they are being asked to make sacrifices and endure hardships. The government should set the example."

Josephus Returns To 'The Grind'

JOSEPHUS DANIELS, a newspaper man who, more than anyone else, is credited with winning Mexican friendship for the United States, deserves a national salute as he gets back on his regular job, after long deviation in public life. That job is running a newspaper, the News and Observer of Raleigh, N. C. In spite of his diplomatic success, it is the job he likes best.

Not the least interesting thing about this move is the fact that Josephus is 79 years old. And why is he returning to the grind instead of taking his ease? It isn't merely because he loves the smell of printer's ink and the roar of the presses and the life and action that always swirl around a newspaper office. "There is but one business in America today," he says. "That is winning the war. There will be but one business when the fighting is over. That will be to win the peace." May he be spared to help in both and enjoy the fruits thereof!

Suggested revision of the popular Valentine sentiment, to the boy friend in service: "Roses are red, violets are blue, sugar is scarce—and where are you?"

At least one magician in the Mansfield area admits that the half dollars he pulls out of the air cannot be applied to payment of his income tax.

REMARKABLE ADAPTATION TO ENVIRONMENT

Post-War Slumps Not Inevitable

—By CHARLES P. STEWART

PEACETIME'S requirements for our country's production of everything are just as great as wartime's, according to Prof. Alvin H. Hansen, Harvard's noted economist, and on that proposition, so stated, probably not many authorities will argue contrariwise.

The professor advances his thesis in connection with a study, recently completed by him and just released in the form of a report by the National Resources Planning board, to which he's special adviser.

The nub of it is that Dr. Hansen doesn't consider post-war economic depressions inevitable, and maybe he can prove it, as to the future, but he doesn't stop there; he goes on to say that experience doesn't support the theory of such depressions' inevitability.

I never heard it contradicted that that's exactly what all past experience HAS indicated.

Dr. Hansen recognizes that war is developing our productive capacity far in excess of civilians' demands on it hitherto. Some observers take the view that, the conflict presently being ended, demands on our farmers will slump back to their peacetime normal, which won't absorb their previously overgrown outputs, and that that'll involve a crash and then a prolonged depression.

Not Inevitable.

By no means necessarily, rejoins the professor; by leading much more abundant civilian lives, we'll sop up all our surplusage of energy, directly.

Up to that point he makes out a pretty good case.

Few folk have more of the necessities and luxuries of life than they want. If they can get more of them, unquestionably they will be perfectly acquisecent.

But will they be able to pay for them?

If not, the stuff will be available but there won't be a market for it.

Peacetime buying, by would-be civilian customers, is different from wartime buying by the government. The government does it largely on credit, up to 50 or 100 billions, and the debt runs along for as long as the government finds it convenient to continue it. An ordinary purchaser needs cash, or, if he trades on tick, has to foot his bill some time short of three or four generations on into infinity.

Civilian demand won't blow up immediately following peace's restoration. It didn't the last time. No, consumerdom will be half starved to death for domestic supplies and such stuff. It'll still have a lot of its wartime wages left on hand, and will buy like fury. Dr. Hansen concedes as much and says it ought to be restrained, or it'll result in a boom. He recognizes that slumps follow booms, that hard times follow slumps, and he's afraid of them. He says a boom's our "gravest danger."

What's to prevent a boom, though?

Taxes as Brake.

Well, high taxation ought to do it. We'll have that, all right. Quite likely it'll put a ceiling on civilian over-buying. But, if so, why won't it also prevent civilian absorption of war-expanded production? Its direction into civilian channels?

It takes quite a while for a war to make it after-effects felt.

We all remember that it took a dozen years for 1914-18 to get in its deadly work. The Spanish-American scrap wasn't much of a conflict, but it did have something of an aftermath quite a bit later. The War of the Secession was too far back for my recollection, but I do recall a corking, mean depression in 1893, and President Melvin A. Traylor of the First National bank of Chicago, long dead now, told me that he considered it the last thunderclap of that convulsion, nearly 30 years delayed.

I'd think that this one is of sufficient proportions to hang fire for a century.

Where Prof. Hansen gets his dope to the purport that experience doesn't prove wars to have preceded awful economic periods is a good deal of a mystery.

Favorite Stories

—By GEORGE TUCKER

NEW YORK — True it is that food for one man may be poison for another, and a tale that makes you laugh is likely to leave your companions unmoved.

Nevertheless, everyone has a favorite story, and here are some:

Jimmy Durante's favorite: "I'm sitting in the park and there was a fellow along side of me asleep with about 25 flies on his nose. He woke up, looked at the flies but was too lazy to do anything about it, and went back to sleep. Finally a bee came along and stung him on the nose. He awoke with a start and growled, "There's always got to be a smart aleck in the crowd. Just for that everybody off."

ONE of F.D.R.'s favorite tales concerns the two Negroes who were startled by the scream of police sirens and the roar of a motorcycle escort as it paced the way for a long black limousine.

Awed by the number of cops, one of the Negroes inquired, "Who dat?"

"You ignoramus," said his companion, "dat's de president of de United States."

"Yeah," said the first Negro, "What HE Done?"

IT'S Milton Wright, author of "The Art of Conversation" who prefers this one about the census taker who inquired of a buxom Irish wife:

"What's your name?"

"McCarthy. Rose McCarthy."

"And your husband's name?"

"Naturally, it's the same as me own, McCarthy."

"I mean his full name."

"When he is full." Rose replied, "he thinks its Jack Dempsey, but when I lay me hands on him it's still McCarthy."

Increase In Streamliners.

In 1941 there were 34 new streamlined cars put into operation throughout the country. That brought the total of the new type to 121 trains and 1,002 cars. There were 26 more streamliner trains on order before the war started. As the year closed, 75,000 miles of mile-a-minute passenger runs were the daily total which was a 36 per cent increase in two years.

Streamlining with the railroads is about seven years old. By fast schedules, light equipment and modernistic designs, the railroads have made a bid for the business which was lost through the years owing to automobile competition. With the restrictions which will be placed upon tires and new auto sales during the war, the railroads may be expected to make further gains.—Toledo Blade.

FDR Cracks Down On Loose Talk By High-Ups In Official Family

—By DREW PEARSON and ROBERT S. ALLEN

WASHINGTON—The president has finally cracked down on high members of his official family who run at the mouth with monkey wrench-throwing statements.

In recent weeks there have been several. One was Navy Secretary Knox's pronunciamento that the first U. S. war job was to defeat Hitler and then we would take care of the Japs. This emanation created a tremendous furor in Chungking.

The Chinese government made vehement formal representations and the $500,000,000 loan hurriedly rushed through congress last week was one aftermath of this unfortunate incident.

Another embarrassing pronouncement was Secretary Jesse Jones' bland claim of a $400,000,000 synthetic rubber producing program—most of the contracts of which have not even been awarded yet. Experts caustically assailed this statement as misleading and designed to cover up Jones' bungling of the rubber situation.

The president has now decided to end these outpourings from members of his official family. To this end he has directed that henceforth high officials must submit all statements and speeches to the Office of Facts and Figures, headed by able Librarian of Congress Archibald MacLeish.

Secret instructions to this effect were transmitted in a letter, signed by White House Secretary Steve Early, to all cabinet members, their assistants and heads of all government agencies.

Under the order, Office of Facts and Figures will not act as a censor, but the practical effect will amount to that. OFF will check the statements and speeches with other interested government agencies and "recommend" deletions and changes to avert incidents.

Capital Chaff.

JOE KENNEDY, former U. S. ambassador to Britain who had strong isolationist leanings, is quietly trying to wangle a top wartime job. Kennedy's overtures, so far indirect, have been through friends with influential administration ties. . . . Best editorial so far of 1942: Josephus Daniels' announcement that after eight years as secretary of the navy and eight years as ambassador to Mexico, he is resuming editorship of the Raleigh (N. C.) News and Observer. "It is with some temerity," Josephus wrote, "that this amateur undertakes to succeed the more sedate editor Jonathan Worth Daniels (his son) who has responded to the call of the government." Sometime ago the Nazis threw into a concentration camp President Seip of the University of Norway, a man of 60. Now the Norwegian legation in Washington learns that Seip was sentenced Jan. 3 to four weeks in a dark cell. . . . British censorship of U. S. airmail from South America makes it almost as slow as mail carried by sea. The British still demand to see our mail at Trinidad though we now have our own censor. . . . The House stationery room ran short of rubber bands and appealed to a former member of the House, Maury Maverick of Texas, now with Nelson, to secure a priority for them. . . . Through an error in transcription, The Merry-Go-Round last week made it appear that the censorship board had tried to bar unfavorable comment on Hull's appeasement policy with the Vichy government in France. The fact is that the state department representative tried to bar criticism, but the censorship board turned down the request.

Poet Ghostwriter.

COLLEAGUES of Representative Earl Wilson, loquacious exponent of a 10 p. m. curfew for government stenographers (to make them more efficient in the mornings), blinked their eyes when the Indiana rookie rushed into print with a rhymed statement on the issue, reading in part:

"I've asked the girls to obey the curfew,
"And be in bed by 10 p. m.—
"Now Hollywood has crossed me up
"And sent us very handsome men."

However, Archibald MacLeish, poet-Librarian of Congress, would have been even more astounded had he known the circumstances behind Wilson's poetic effect, which lamented the difficulty of persuading government stenogs to turn in early because Robert Montgomery and other handsome movie stars are holding down war jobs in the capital.

Actually, Wilson's poem was written by an enterprising newsman who needed a new angle on the story. The reporter suggested to Wilson that he make a lot of mimeographed copies and send them to the newspapers.

"Swell idea," enthused Wilson. "Who wrote this thing?"

"Archie MacLeish," replied the reporter nonchalantly.

"Who's he?" asked Wilson.

"Oh, you don't have to worry about him," said the reporter. "He's the outstanding poet in the government."

America Firster.

A FEDERAL grand jury in New York recently indicted Werner von Clemm, naturalized Prussian, on charges of acting as agent of the Nazi High Command in smuggling large quantities of stolen gems into the U. S. to finance subversive activities. Married to a prominent banker's daughter, von Clemm is related to Nazi Foreign Minister Ribbentrop.

Sensational evidence about von Clemm's operations will be revealed by the government at his forthcoming trial. One item in the government's possession is evidence that von Clemm was an active undercover leader of the New York branch of the America First Committee; also that he contributed financially to this organization.

BULL-VOICED Senator Charles Tobey, New Hampshire isolationist, is getting socked coming and going. After being floored by an irate anti-isolationist constituent in his home town, Tobey was scathingly denounced by Robert P. Burroughs, New Hampshire Republican National Committeeman. A World War pilot, Burroughs demanded that Tobey "stop his flow of ill-planned oratory regarding foreign affairs until the war is won." . . . Judge Robert N. Wilkin, in the Cleveland Bar Association Journal, condemns the current practice of deluging congress with floods of telegrams and petitions. "It is a trend," writes Wilkin, "that may lead to the inefficiency which brought free government in Europe to its present state. It tends to deprive government of that diligent inquiry, that independent judgment based upon fact, which efficiency requires. . . . William B. Ziff, a Chicago publisher who was referred to in the Merry-Go-Rund as a man who came to Washington hoping to get a war contract, is not a war contractor. The report that he was seeking a war contract is incorrect.

Watching Trends

—By JACK STINNETT

WASHINGTON — There is a great deal of misunderstanding and confusion about what is going to happen to American manpower after Feb. 16, when registration for the new draft starts.

Current reports that we will put three to five million more men under arms has led some to fear that every able-bodied youth and oldster capable of shouldering a gun will be ordered into uniform immediately. This is far from the truth.

Brig. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, selective service national director, recently published his opinion that "younger men, those without dependents and not absolutely necessary in vital occupations, if physically fit, will be taken into the fighting forces as they are needed."

THERE isn't anyone in the United States who knows as much about operation of the selective service act as General Hershey. And he didn't put all those "ifs" and "ands" into that statement for nothing.

But the general further says: "To those who are not in these classes, I say 'keep cool'."

Inspiration for that caution probably came after General Hershey had waded through a couple of carloads of mail from frantic oldsters, those with dependents, infirmities or a job they can't afford to lose. The chances of such men getting called are about 10,000 to one and then only if they haven't sense enough to appeal their cases from the decisions of a jittery draft board that has failed in its understanding of the law.

Reclassification of the 21-to-28 age group to bring into the armed forces all men, physically fit and not burdened with excessive responsibilities to either dependents or defense jobs, will result in hundreds of thousands of new draftees. Recalling of all the men between 28 and 35, hitherto deferred because of age, occupation, or because they had done their stint in the National Guard, Reserves, or regular armed forces, will bring in a lot more.

From the 36 to 44-year-olds, Selective Service doesn't expect to get more than one man out of 20 for field duty.

HERSHEY says, "I believe we can put four, perhaps five, million men under arms without greatly disturbing our social or economic systems. I am confident this war will never have to go below Class 1 for men."

These are the men fit for general or limited military service.

Men not called into the armed forces may find themselves in part-time or full-time civilian or home defense jobs, but there will have to be a new law before that can happen.

A Farmer's Diary

Home Defense

—By CALVIN A. BYERS

DEEP in the woods by a slanting chestnut snag, I saw where new soil and finely divided grains of decayed wood had been piled. Some little rodent had been busy. No kind of field mouse works that way. The opening was far too small for a groundhog. (Besides, he is asleep). Gray squirrels and fox squirrels do not burrow in this fashion. An opossum would have aversion to such manual labor.

So by process of elimination, I could single out but one trim, pert, energetic creature, that would have ambition to remodel his home in such a fashion—the same one who all summer shows his industry by gathering ripe grain and seeds for his winter store—B'rer Chipmunk.

That burrow interested me greatly, for I never saw before where just one single squirrel could perform so great a task. The sides of the opening were smooth and on close examination, I knew it was inhabited.

The weather was not cold. I stopped, some distance off, behind a tree, and watched. I waited 20 minutes, which seemed longer, and then a shy, frisky creature entered very cautiously. Hardly had he disappeared until I saw him scamper off again, with another in hot pursuit. Far down through the leaves I heard them go, then, chipper and triumphant, the owner of the burrow returned and dashed into his house without a moment's hesitation.

Not long after, the same intruder, or another that looked much like him, came to the entrance, looked around, sniffed the air and like a flash, popped in. I hurried over to the entrance, for I believed there would be trouble inside. I listened. At first I heard scampering through the hidden tunnnels, later some scuffling and sharp squeaks. Finally, out leaped the would-be robber, at full speed. The owner pursued his victim but ten feet, then returned. I never saw the sleek coats of two chipmunks so disheveled! From their appearance, it must have been a terrible row, just inside. At any rate, I was satisfied that the aggressor was the one punished, and the rightful owner kept possession of his well earned home.

JAPS SWARMING OVER SINGAPORE IN LAST FIGHT

London Fears Enemy Reaches City as Radio Station Blanks Out.

means that an attack is in progress.

Other Japanese troops effected a new landing at Gasmata, on the south coast of Australian-mandated New Britain island in the Bismarck archipelago. New Britain lies about 600 miles north of Australia.

A Reuters (British news agency) dispatch said the Singapore radio went off the air at 7:30 a. m., EWT, today.

London quarters gravely acknowledged that the situation on the embattled island was "very bad" as Japanese reinforcements attacked along a two-mile front.

A previous British counter-attack, aimed at wiping out the first Japanese landing parties, had been beaten off by sheer weight of numbers.

Domei said Japanese engineers swam out under cover of darkness and "worked frantically throughout the night" to repair the Johore causeway, and that by morning a steady stream of Japanese troops and supplies poured over the structure.

The Vichy (French) radio broadcast a bulletin from Imperial Tokyo headquarters saying all British airdromes on the island had been occupied.

A Singapore communique, following heavy action in the night, announced "some further withdrawal of our forces" despite their stubborn resistance

The Japanese were reported to have succeeded in "making further landings on the island in the area between Sungei Mandai and Sungei Kranji," a zone due west of the causeway across the strait which British bombers and warships breached after the retreat from Malaya Jan. 30.

Far to the east, a widening of the Borneo fighting zone was indicated. French news reports broadcast from Algiers said a Japanese fleet had been observed off Banjermasin, on the south coast of Dutch Borneo, and it was presumed a landing would be attempted.

Chinese Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek conferred with leaders of India at New Delhi and the Viceroy, Lord Linithgow, said Japan would learn it "bodes our enemy no good."

Fuller collaboration of the 850,000,000 inhabitants of China and India in the united nations' war effort apparently was taking form.

A quick decision obviously was sought by the Japanese shock troops striking anew at the British defenders of Singapore.

U. S. Consul-General Kenneth S. Patton closed the American consulate yesterday, turning United States interests over to Swiss representatives. With two aides, Patton awaited transportation from the island.

Bombs and shells hammered out paths for Japanese riflemen, although the British exacted a bloody toll and hurricane fighter pilots battled on against odds which a spokesman said were twice as great as those at the height of the battle of Britain.

The invasion army evidently was driving to complete the conquest of the $400,000,000 fortified island—one key to the southwest Pacific area—by tomorrow as a holiday gift to Emperor Hirohito

The Japanese are strong on holiday victories, such as the capture of Hongkong Christmas Day and the winning or Manila at the New Year. They celebrate Feb. 11 as Kigensetsu, the anniversary of the legendary founding of their empire in 660 B. C.

A British headquarters communique said imperial lines were forced to withdraw yesterday afternoon under heavy direct pressure and the menace of infiltration. The powerful original landing parties were reported unofficially to have been strongly reinforced.

A Tokyo dispatch broadcast by Stefani, Italian news agency, declared Japanese forces had encircled Bukit Timah village, a rail and highway junction five miles northwest of the heart of Singapore and an equal distance southeast of Tenga airport, which already had fallen to Japanese driving from a beachhead at Pasir Laba.

The distant but vitally related battle of Burma progressed in the Salween river zone 1,200 miles above Singapore.

The Tokyo radio broadcast a report that the Japanese had crossed that strategic stream which empties into the Gulf of Martaban and "are advancing westward towards Rangoon," the capital of Burma and supply port of China's chief munitions road.

From Rangoon itself, however, came word that RAF Blenheim bombers pounded Japanese field headquarters again yesterday at Paan, on the Salween 30 miles north of Moulmein, and land fighting lapsed into desultory skirmishes. Moulmein fell Jan. 31.

Reports U. S. Force In New Zealand

BOSTON —(AP)— The arrival at Wellington, New Zealand, of the vanguard of a United States naval force was reported today to the Christian Science Monitor by its correspondent, Joseph C. Harsch, who described also the landing of American reinforcements at "way stations along the route" from Pearl Harbor.

In a copyrighted story, Harsch told of his landing at Wellington from a destroyer, described as the first unit of Admiral Leary's American forces. He said the landfall was reached even before the public announcement of Admiral Leary's appointment to command all Allied forces in the Anzac area.

The Monitor's correspondent said he traveled part of the way from Pearl Harbor with the forces that attacked the Japanese mandated Gilbert and Marshall islands. Then he changed to another unit by breeches buoy in mid-Pacific.

The German army was reported by usually well informed persons with Axis connections to be making a strong effort to stabilize the Russian front in preparation for a spring offensive in the Mediterranean basin and east.

Observers in Bern, Switzerland, said the ultimate goals were the oil-rich Caucasus of the U.S.S.R., Egypt, Iraq and the Suez canal. They expressed belief Bulgaria and Turkey probably would be involved

Russia, however, pressed her winter counter-offensive. Recapture of seven additional populated points was reported in a mid-day communique on continued "active operations against the German Fascist troops."

The veil of silence on specific gains, imposed recently when Red army officers reported evidence that German communications were disrupted and that Berlin might profit from Moscow broadcasts, was maintained.

The Italian Gazette listed losses of Premier Mussolini's armed forces on Mediterranean basin and Russian fronts since Jan. 1 at 1,245 killed, 2,687 wounded and 9,860 missing

Fred Otte, director of the prime contractors' trailer, said that he was "very gratified" with the result of the first of 25 stops to be made by the caravan in Ohio cities. Otte also said an industrial survey of the Mansfield area to learn how it could fit into the war production program.

Routzon said that the manufacturers were greatly satisfied with the displays, and that they had commented on the improvement over the first defense clinic held here last year in which highly technical samples were displayed. The inspecting plant representatives, according to Routzon felt that this new display contained many items which they could duplicate on production lines.

The trailers were kept overnight at the armory where members of Company F, Ohio State guard, stood watch over them. This morning, the trailers left for Ashland where they will make their second stop conversation preceding the shooting, Robinson said.

INVALID FARMER FACES CHARGES

Reformatory records show that a James Wilson had been sentenced from Scioto county on Dec. 23, 1940, to serve a one-to-20 year term for forgery, and had been paroled last Jan. 21. Robinson identified Wilson as a New Boston, O., resident.

The shooting took place at a farm on Route 39, four miles east of Mansfield, where Harris is a tenant farmer. The sheriff reported Wilson had been paroled to S. A. Foltz, of Mansfield, owner of the farm.

The sheriff said Wilson decided yesterday that he was dissatisfied with the arrangement, for him to work at the farm, and planned to come to Mansfield to talk to Foltz He entered the house and changed his clothes.

As Wilson prepared to leave the building, the sheriff said Harris called to him and asked where he was going. Wilson then entered Harris' room and announced he was leaving to talk to Foltz. Harris then said he would not permit him to leave, and when Wilson arose to go, the man in bed drew his revolver from under his pillow and fired one shot, the sheriff said.

Robinson said Harris previously summoned Miss Chamberlain and requested her to bring him his revolver. She did so, and later, when the two men were in the room together, she placed a chair outside the door at Harris' request, because there was no latch on the door, according to the sheriff.

Despite the fact that the bullet passed all the way through his body, piercing his intestine, Wilson walked from the house to the milkhouse of the farm. There the sheriff found him at 4:30 p. m., an hour later, and he brought the wounded man to the hospital.

Harris willingly turned over the revolver to the sheriff, the latter reported Despite an exhaustive search, Robinson was unable to locate the bullet

Harris suffered his injury when a tractor overturned and fell on him. He has been back at the farm for five weeks, following a period of confinement at General hospital here.

BUTLER QUIET AGAIN WITH WEEKLEY BACK

Storm Over Suspension Ends as Board Seeks Authority To Dismiss Charges.

And the group stayed at the courthouse for nearly six hours, while the stage shifted alternately from the office of Superintendent Robinson, to that of Prosecutor Harold T. Lutz, to the common pleas court room.

At the end of those six hours the crowd, by continuous and insistent demand, had exacted from the school board the promise to do everything it legally could to withdraw the charges against the superintendent.

The board promised to submit to the prosecutor a formal request in writing asking what authority it had for dismissing the charges. Several board members said later they either had to agree to the demand of the crowd on this point or face the alternative of remaining in the courtroom all night.

Meanwhile, however, Weekley indicated he was proceeding with his preparation of an answer to the charges brought against him. He said he expected to file his answer within several days. Details of the accusations against the 35-year-old school administrator, which he has branded as "false and unfair," have not been announced.

Weekley declined formal comment on the developments of the past few days, as did County Superintendent Robinson.

After voting to lift the suspension of Weekley, the board voted to restore Millard to his position as music instructor. Millard was the only one of 12 teachers at the school whose name was absent from a statement expressing support of Weekley. The statement first was turned over to the board at its meeting last Wednesday night, and later made public by a spokesman for the teachers.

The school board's action yesterday came after a stormy two-hour session in Lutz's office. Two of the members, Morgan and Roberts, had gone there rather than remain with the crowd, which went to the courtroom at the suggestion of County Superintendent Robinson when he saw his offices would not accommodate the group.

Two other members, Ivan Gower, president, and Wade Forbes, were summoned to Lutz's office by telephone. These two were escorted to the office by a group of seven members picked by the village delegation. The fifth member, Walter E. Wareham, later was summoned, when the rest of the board decided to go into special session to reconsider Weekley's suspension. While awaiting Wareham, the other four board members came in for a verbal lashing from the group of seven.

The men, most of them farmers, included Earl Ward, delegated spokesman by the village group; Clarence Tugend, former Worthington township trustee and school board member, P. M. Crunkilton, another former board member, James McFarland, Clarence Harris, Clarence Forbes and Guy Moore.

Hardly had the delegation entered the office when the fireworks broke loose, Ward demanding that the board "settle the question at once and open the school."

"We're here in the best interests of the taxpayers of the community," he declared. "We want the school open tomorrow and we're going to stay here until you fellows agree on that point."

Ward declared that the group accompanying him represented the majority of the people in the village school district in demanding that the school be open and run in a "business-like manner."

He charged that the board's "mishandling of affairs" had caused dissatisfaction among the teachers and had resulted in Weekley's ouster.

"All we ask," he continued, shaking his finger at Morgan and Roberts, "is what is fair and just. We want the board to dismiss charges against Weekley and reinstate him without prejudice.

Turning to the board again he said:

"You fellows weren't obligated to accept those charges. Why didn't those people prefer their charges in court instead of dragging this thing through the school board."

Lutz interrupted to tell the board that the school should not be kept closed and that it was the duty of the board to see that it was opened without delay.

Tugend took up the argument at this point.

"I plead with both of you gentlemen to use your head," he declared, addressing Morgan and Roberts.

"We're tired of this monkey business. We want this thing settled once and for all—today. We're not going to let four or five men run this school district. We're taxpayers and we're going to have something to say about what goes on.

"We want our children in school. If you fellows are too ignorant to sit on the board use your heads and resign."

The air in the small three-room office was charged when Crunkilton rose to plead with the board "to get together."

"What are you fellows going to do?" he asked. "There are a couple hundred of your fellow townsmen over at the courthouse waiting for your decision. They have been there for nearly three hours now. They demand to know what you are going to do."

After some 30 minutes of discussion, the board adopted a resolution requesting Lutz to represent them, and named Morgan acting clerk in the absence of Archie O'Hearn, who regularly fills the position

Lutz warned the board for the second time that it was its duty to keep the school open and see that the students attended classes.

"I can't tell you what to do," the prosecutor said. "It's up to the board whether it wants to rescind the suspension order."

He explained that, so far as he was able to determine without investigation, a hearing on the charges would have to be held should Weekley file his answer within the limits prescribed by law.

"It's up to him (Weekley) to either answer the charges or default," he explained.

He told the board that he would investigate its authority to withdraw the charges should it make such a request in writing.

Members concurred that they had been given a "hot potato" to handle in the Weekley case and discussed at great lengths with the prosecutor the possibilities of dismissing the charges, indicating that it was their desire to do that.

The motion to lift the suspension was entered by Morgan and seconded by Roberts, the two who had proposed the suspension last week. It carried unanimously.

Wareham then made the motion to restore Millard to his former position as music instructor. Millard had been named acting superintendent by the board Saturday night. Forbes seconded, and all members concurred.

It was after 5 p. m. when the board members went to common pleas courtroom to inform the still-waiting crowd of its decision. The crowd had waited in the courtroom for nearly six hours keeping its leaders' pledge to stay until the board reached a decision.

Among the villagers were parents and pupils and practically the entire teaching staff.

Warning that he wanted no expression of opinion or feeling, Lutz read to the crowd the resolution adopted by the board. After explaining technicalities of law concerning future board action, he retired, but the crowd kept board members in heated argument for another two hours.

The group learned of the couple's engagement when Miss Helen Tucker noticed the sparkle of Miss Rusk's diamond ring which had been hidden among the American Beauty roses of a corsage that Mr. Marvicson had given to his fiancee for the occasion.

Games were enjoyed during the evening with prizes going to the Misses Mary Peterman, Gladys Perry and Jennie Lou Tipper. The home was decorated in keeping with the Valentine theme. When the two-course luncheon was served, centerpiece for the table was of red and white flowers. White tapers were used in crystal holders.

Guests for the evening were Mrs. Anne Marvicson and daughter, mother, and sister of the prospective bridegroom; Mr. and Mrs. Melvin Marvicson, brother and sister-in-law of Mr. Marvicson; Mrs. Albert Heitz and daughter, Rita, aunt and cousin of Miss Rusk, and Miss Alice Hess.

Tentative plans of the couple were revealed in the favors, which contained a snapshot of Miss Rusk and her fiance and the date, June 20, 1942. They are planning to have a formal wedding in an open ceremony at the Grace Episcopal church.

Miss Rusk attended Madison high school. Mr. Marvicson, a native of Philadelphia, Pa., was graduated from high school there. Both are employes of Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing company, where Mr. Marvicson is a commercial artist. MRS. R. E. WHARTON SPEAKS AT MEETING

Interesting Talk on "Early Leaders of Ohio" Given by Mrs. Wharton at Luncheon of Victorian Club Monday Afternoon.

MRS. R. E. WHARTON gave an interesting and informative talk on "Early Leaders in Ohio" at the meeting of the Victorian club Monday afternoon at the Women's Club. Continuing the club's study of Ohio, Mrs. Wharton told of the life of William Henry Harrison, who was born in Virginia, and later became material in setting up the government of Ohio. He was a scholar, statesman and a general.

After winning a highly publicized victory over the Tecumseh Indians in 1811 at Tippecanoe creek he was sent to congress and then to the senate. In 1840 he was a successful Whig candidate for presidency. The life of James and Abram Garfield, also of Ohio, has been told in many history books. He was president of Hiram college when the faculty of the school numbered five. He played an important part in the Civil war and for 17 years was a congressman and representative compromise candidate. He defeated Hancock for the presidency in 1880 and a year after his election was assassinated by Guitea.

Among the great names of men who were native Ohioans are found the famous names of Grant, Hayes and Sherman, all great men of their day. There was also Ewing, a member of President Lincoln's cabinet who was one of the first miners of coal and salt in Hocking Valley.

At the meeting Monday luncheon was served at two long tables attractively decorated with red sweet peas and red and white appointments. Hostesses were Mrs. D. C. Lavender and Mrs. A. L. Price. A short quiz on the work studied by the group at previous meetings was given preceding the program. The next meeting will be held Feb. 23 at the Women's Club with Mrs. Oliver Henkel as hostess. Bad Coughs Yield Quickly To This Home Mixture

Surprisingly Quick Relief. No Cooking. Saves Money.

Here's a medicine for coughs due to colds, that you mix in your own kitchen. It's so easy to prepare that a child could do it, but it's so effective that, once tried, you'll never again be without it in your home.

Make a syrup by stirring 2 cups of granulated sugar and one cup of water a few moments, until dissolved. No cooking needed — no trouble at all.

Then get 2½ ounces of Pinex from any druggist, put it into a pint bottle, and add your syrup. This gives you a full pint—a family supply—of very wonderful cough syrup. It's thrifty, too—about four times as much for your money. And children take it willingly, because it tastes so good.

This home mixture takes right hold of a cough in a way that's surprising. It loosens the phlegm, soothes the irritated membranes, and helps clear the air passages. Eases the soreness, and lets you rest at night.

Pinex is a special compound of proven ingredients, in concentrated form, a most reliable agent for soothing throat and bronchial membranes. Money refunded if it doesn't please you in every way.

POWER FAILURE THROWS 1,500 OUT OF WORK

Damaged Boiler Equipment at Galion Shuts Off Power To 3 Industries.

GALION — Word was received by Service Director Charles R. Geiger, late Monday that new grates were being shipped immediately from Dayton, in order to set a damaged boiler in operation at the Galion Municipal Light and Power plant.

Failure to operate the boiler since Sunday noon effected approximately 1,500 workers in the city Monday. Three big plants, the Ohio Overcoat company, the American Steel Abrasives company, and the Stratbury Manufacturing company were completely without power.

Domestic consumers were not effected by the shut-down, but were asked to co-operate in conserving power as the entire production is dependent upon another boiler which was put into operation in the emergency. The boiler had been shut down at the time for cleaning, but it is not able to carry the full load of the city.

Burning out of the grates caused hot coals to drop into the stoker making it impossible to feed the boiler.

A third boiler installed at the plant as part of the $200,000 plant improvement started last year, has not been placed in operation because of inability of the city to obtain valves.

The War Department and the Office of Production Management notified city officials yesterday that the power plant will receive a better rating than the A-4 that it has now. Local industry is largely in defense work and several companies have A-1-A priority ratings.

It is expected that repairs to the boiler will be completed by Wednesday. A service man from the American Engineering company is being sent here to make the stoker installation.

ROTARY CLUB ENTERTAINED

NEW LONDON—Joe E. Gould, nationally known circus clown, was the feature attraction at a luncheon of the New London Rotary club Monday.

Gould, who has traveled hundreds of thousands of miles with the big top, kept his audience in laughter all through his appearance. Opening with a few humorous stories, he went into an impromptu song, featuring several members of the local club, and ended this part of his talk in a more serious vein, as to the "why" of circus clowns. Following the talk he proceeded to "make up" exactly as if he were to appear in the ring.

Mr. Gould will be here again next week when he will appear before the local school students for his skit.

"Pitfalls of Love"

(A Sequel to Marriage Meddlers)

By ADELE GARRISON.

I did not know why stark panic should seize me at Stephen Redfield's request to take Olina's queer fan letter with him to his own room for detailed study, but I was sure of one thing. If he—suspected so strongly by my father of being connected with the gangsters responsible for Marion's disappearance — saw something worthy of study in this letter, it was equally important to us and must not be permitted to leave our possession.

"That, of course, is for Olina to decide," I said with apparent nonchalance, sure that, as we had agreed beforehand, she would follow any lead I gave her. "But if it were my letter, I wouldn't let it out of my possession. I don't know about you, Steve, but I know that girls prize their fan mail inordinately. If it gets so great that it has to be destroyed, they make a fetich of even burning it themselves."

Madge Offers a Copy.

I was improvising by the second, and hoped only that Steve was believing half of what I was telling him.

"I feel that way too, Aunt Madge," Olina said, playing up quickly. "But I would like to help you, Steve.."

"I have it!" I said brightly, hoping I did not appear as inane as I felt. "There's my desk over there, Steve, and plenty of pencils, pens and paper. Why don't you sit down and make a copy of the letter? It will be just as good as the original for you to study, and then you can keep it indefinitely and Olina will have the original here."

May Have Special Meaning.

"Oh, how clever you are, Aunt Madge!" Olina said enthusiastically. "Would you like me to copy it for you, Steve, while you look at the queer picture which came with it? You'll have to copy that too if you want to study it, for I'm getting the queerest feeling about this since you spoke. I believe they mean something special to me. I think I'll tie them into my gown and wear them around with me all the time. And I simply can't bear to have them out of my sight."

She was acting the part of a silly, excited girl to perfection, and I shot a furtive glance at Steve to see if he suspected anything.

He was frowning, but it was from frustration rather than from suspicion, I noted. He knew when he was beaten, too, I saw when he looked at Olina with an apologetic smile, one which I mentally labeled "Stage effect number 10," and spoke with apparent sincerity.

"Sorry to have upset you, Olina," he said, "and of course a copy will do me just as well. I'm probably barking up the wrong tree anyway. But I wouldn't think of asking you to make the copy. Is that the desk you mean, Mrs. Graham? Thank you. I'll just toddle over and get at this."

He walked with his easy, loping grace to the desk, sat down, and began to copy the letter. I turned to the inspection of the water color painting on the parchment paper which had accompanied the letter, and found my amazement increasing as I studied it.

The man who painted it would never see one of his canvases hung in a museum, I knew, but he had certain skill, nevertheless.

At the left was water, evidently a bay, in the middle of which towered the figure of a woman with an uplifted torch in her hand.

"The Statue of Liberty in New York harbor," I said to myself, but I was careful not to utter it aloud. I meant to make no comment save something most banal so long as Stephen Redfield remained in the room.

In the sky above the statue a big airplane hovered, while in the water near its base was a big steamship. There was no trace of a city. Land appeared abruptly at the right of the boat, with a road ending at a fence and gateway, behind which were the outlines of a big house with trees around it.

All the rest of the painting was extremely sketchy, but much attention had been given to the detail of the picket gate, with two big square posts, such as are found in old pre-Revolutionary estates, and which are so widely reproduced.

And when my gaze fell on that gateway, I suddenly shared Stephen Redfield's opinion that there was a message for Olina hidden in that fan letter, but I knew that it was in the painting, rather than in the written note.

Sport Podge

So Joe Romano is "all wound down," and can't play basketball for two weeks, eh?

Seems that was just another bear story from the Tyger den last week. Joe was all wound up with the rest of the Tygers Saturday night when the Hoffman hoopsters gave a brilliant exhibition of alert, up-on-the-toes basketball to trim Mt. Vernon's Yellow Jackets.

Truth to tell, Joe did look a bit peaked and drawn, and even somewhat pale and wan and woebegone, but the game he played resembled no part of a ghost gallop.

* * *

Fremont scribe Dick Behr read the Tyger bear stories with great glee last week, pointing out that the loss of Ken Krupp, following the loss of Jack Shiplet by the Tygers, boosts the Little Giants' stock in the coming Sandusky tournament, where they have already been installed as favorites.

He reported another stock booster in the certain loss by Tiffin Columbian of lanky Bob Pearce, leading scorer of the Tiffin club, who withdrew from school after suffering a sprained ankle.

Columbian and Ashland had been rated in the dop sheet as the only teams capable of giving Fremont and Mansfield a battle in the Sandusky joust.

Art Hilborn, president of the Mansfield Bowling association, sees in tire rationing a boost to central Ohio cities for state conventions and sport tournaments in the next year or so.

Art says that while the Moose state bowling tournament for 1943 has already been awarded to Lorain, it may yet be dropped in Mansfield's lap because of this city's central location, and because of lack of hotel accommodations at Lorain.

Meanwhile Hilborn is pushing the Mansfield association's final week drive for booster teams for the Inter-City tournament at Lorain starting March 7, in an effort to corral enough votes to bring this tourney to Mansfield next year.

Mansfield has enough regular and booster team votes of its own, and enough promised by bowlers from other cities to make this city a strong contender in the selection of the 1943 tournament site.

But Art wants at least 10 more booster teams from here, just to make it sure.

Is it true that a bowling booster Is a guy who don't bowl like he useter?

Waterloo Wonders Roll Again

Fabulous Team Seems Headed For Championship.

By FRITZ HOWELL

COLUMBUS—(AP)— Remember those wild and woolly Waterloo Wonders who had so much fun romping to the state Class B high school basketball championship in 1934 and 1935?

Well, the kids from the Lawrence county hills are on another rampage—looking forward to taking the title again at Springfield March 21.

Magellan Hairston, former Rio Grande "great" and coach of the "Wonders," predicted a few weeks ago that his team would be "there or thereabouts" when the laurels are bestowed. Friday night his proteges sauntered out on the Hanging Rock floor, went through those same old intricate passing maneuvers featured by Hairston's title teams, and racked up a 120 to 55 victory.

That's pretty close to four points a minute—an offense the old Wonders would have been proud of. Center Roach collected 50 points, and Forward Malone hit for 44 in the 32 minutes. The current Wonders have won 14 of 15 contests, losing only to Class A Gallipolis, so maybe Coach Hairston was not kidding when he said his boys were capable of romping through the other 951 Class B squads.

While the Waterloo lads were garnering their big county, plenty of other things were happening on the scholastic cage front. Martins Ferry, the Class A champion, beat Bellaire 75-51 for its 16th conquest of the year, and its 33rd in a row, to take over the major loop pace-setting role. Ames-Bern of Athens county beat New Marshfield 60-32 for its 18th straight win, the best of the Class B records.

Toledo Central, last week's Class A leader, saw its 16-game winning streak shattered by Toledo Libbey, 31-23, while Akron North beat Akron West 53 to 40 for second place with 15 straight.

* * *

Tipp City and McCutchenville went down to defeat for the first time after 12 straight victories, Tipp City losing to Spring Valley and "Cutch" to Versailles. Georgetown, after racking up 11 straight, bowed to Aberdeen by 22-18, ruining Georgetown's chance to become the first Brown county squad in history to go through a season undefeated.

* * *

Glen (Lefty) Nelson, Washington township (Scioto county) star, ran his point total to 530 for 23 games, the state record, although his club lost to Portsmouth East 44-23. The Washington team has won 21 of the 23, both losses being single-pointers to the East squad.

* * *

Sylvester Goeddde, Vaughnsville's giant center, ran his point total to 425 for 14 games, an average of 30.3, which is by far the state's best.

Loop Lead In Wooster Lap

Scots Given Ohio League Lead as Kent Beaten.

(By Associated Press)

Hoot Mon! Wooster's Scots had the Ohio conference basketball race leadership dropped into their laps today "for free."

It was the result of Kent State's defeat of league-leading Baldwin-Wallace last night, 40 to 32.

* * *

The loss at Kent was the Yellow Jackets' first in nine conference starts and dropped them into a tie with Mount Union in the standings. Wooster has seven victories without defeat in league play.

* * *

Kent State, with a loop record of four wins against seven losses, entered the fray a decided underdog but was leading 18-14 at halftime and outdistanced Baldwin-Wallace after the score was knotted at 18 points in the third quarter.

* * *

Ohio State journeyed to Iowa to absorb a 52-41 beating after leading 25-17 at the half. Bob Shaw, Bud Wise and Fred Miller built up the Bucks' first-half lead before the Hawkeyes rallied. Max Geeowets was Ohio's high scorer with 11 points.

TRAPSHOOTING CLUB TO HELP TRAIN MARKSMEN

HAVANA, Cuba —(AP)— The best shots in the United States are going to help the citizens become better marksmen. E. R. Lutz, of Knoxville, Tenn., president of the Amateur Trapshooting association, said today that members of his group would devote one day each week to training other citizens.

"The members will lend their guns and the use of the range facilities while the students must furnish the ammunition," he explained.

Legion Loses On High Game

High Handicap Brings Shutout For Leaders.

Club bowling league leaders were bumped off by their lowly brethren last night at Colony alleys as the top-spot American Legion was blanked by Mansfield Savings, and Optimists and Schoolmasters, tied for second, dropped 1-2 decisions to Lumbermen and Kiwanis.

American Legion rolled high game, on the board, too, but it's 1024 wasn't good enough to beat the 1028 which a 48-pin handicap gave Mansfield Savings.

That handicap gave the Bankers three 1,000 games and a 3,069 total on a string of 1023-1013-1028.

Smith turned in the league's high game of 246, and Garrison had high total of 630. Mains had 613, Lutz 627. Smith 600, Gump 616.

Show New Tyger Grid Helmets

DEANIE BLACK

Two of the new plastic helmets purchased by the high school for a squad of 33 football Tygers next fall are shown here by Deanie Black of The News-Journal. Weighing only half as much as last year's headgear, the new helmets have all the up-to-date wrinkles, including a special chin strap guaranteed to keep the helmet comfortably in place.

Westies Meet Supplies

Two Clubs Meet In Playoff Of City 'A' League.

The Westinghouse Electrics and the Mansfield Athletic Supplies will clash in the play off for the City "A" league crown tomorrow at 9 p. m. in the Mansfield Senior high school gymnasium.

The Electrics have won the first round of loop play and last week the Supplies iced the second round.

Followers of the league maintain that the teams are evenly matched and that both collected their victories through an ability to crease the ring early and often.

Both clubs have averaged almost 33 points a game.

Bruce McGinty, loop scoring champion, will lead the Supplies while Howard Poole, runner up in the scoring competition, tops the Westies' efforts.

Preliminary game will match a picked team composed of players from other City "A" league teams against either the Willard Studebakers or the Canton Refiners.

Indiana Nips Illinois

Hoosiers Climb Within Half Game of Second.

CHICAGO — (AP) — Everything these four will be played at Bloomington, Ind., way today. The Hoosiers had handed Illinois its first defeat of the Big Ten season last night, 41-36, and climbed within a half game of second place. Better yet, their remaining schedule is the most favorable of any of the conference's first division clubs.

Indiana has six games to play and only one is against a title contender — Minnesota and of these four will bep layed at Bloomington, including the Gopher tilt.

Not a team changed its position in the standings as a result of last night's four games. Wisconsin buffeted Chicago, 54-20, and Purdue cracked Northwestern, 50-41, to enable the Badgers and Boilermakers to remain in a tie for fourth place. Iowa, in sixth place, whipped Ohio State, 52-44, in the night's fourth game.

Purdue and Minnesota will meet at Minneapolis in Saturday's standout game, with one due to absorb its fourth beating. The other three members of the top five will oppose second-division foes: Indiana entertaining last place Chicago, Illinois at home to ninth place Michigan and Wisconsin host to eighth place Ohio State. Iowa and Northwestern will tangle at Evanston.

NOTRE DAME BESTS GREAT LAKES, 46-23

CHICAGO —(AP)— To the list of teams that beat the Great Lakes Training Station basketball squad, add Notre Dame.

The Irish turned the trick managed previously only by Ohio State, Michigan State and Creighton when they bested the Sailors last night, 46-43, before a navy relief fund crowd of 12,236 in the Chicago stadium. The Navy record now is 21 victories in 25 games. The Irish chalked up their 12th win in 16 contests.

Cabs Profit On Forfeit

Second-Place Buckeye Beers Win Three.

A forfeit by Mets Auto Supply helped the Safety Cabs to hang on to first place in the Commercial "C" bowling league at Colony alleys last night as the second-place Buckeye Beers, trailing by only one game, scored a shutout over N. A. Knitting.

Burger rolled seven straight strikes in chalking up the league's high game of 265, and also took total honors with 629. Goebel Beers had high total of 2626 and high game of 933.

After Game Snacks Given To Defense

HILLSBORO—(AP)—That usual "after-the-game snack for Lynchburg high school's basketball team passed out of existence today.

* * *

The class B scholastic squad decided it would pass up the "eats" after out-of-town contests, and put the money thus saved into a defense bond fund.

* * *

Lynchburg will try tonight at Blanchester for its sixth straight victory in the Clinton-Highland basketball league. It has already clinched the championship.

Ashland Five Seeks Revenge

Hope Tyger Heat Wave Will Cool Off Tonight.

Ashland high cagers invade senior high gym tonight seeking revenge for the early season defeat suffered at the hands of Mansfield's Tygers, and attempting thereby to build morale for their game later in the week with Mt. Vernon, a tilt which Ashland must win to stay in the running for the N.C.O. league championship.

Properly impressed by the 45-23 victory scored by the Tygers over Mt. Vernon Saturday night, the Ashlanders realize Mansfield was hot for that game, and hope the heat wave won't continue.

Mansfield needed a second-half heat wave to subdue Ashland on the A's court in their first meeting, as the Tygers were unable to hit the hoop in the opening half.

Every time Bob Winbigler scores a point from now on he sets a new all-time Mansfield high season's scoring record. Last Saturday he chalked up 16 points against Mt. Vernon to bring his total for this winter to 187, which was 11 over the old record of 176 made by Gene Miller several seasons ago.

It's a foregone conclusion that no high school team will keep Winbigler from shooting with his one-handed stab shot. It's just a question of whether he hits or not, and opponents can be depended on to rush him and try to disturb his shooting eye.

Reserve teams of the two schools will meet in a preliminary game at 7 o'clock tonight.

Swashbuckling Era.

Recalling the days when his father spelled gallant adventure for the silent screen, Douglas Fairbanks, jr., brings to the Ohio screen a similar picture of the swashbuckling era by his dual role in "The Corsican Brothers." Alexander Dumas' thrilling novel. Fairbanks appears as gallant and gay in one role and deep and forboding in the other. In both parts he is bent on a single purpose, to avenge the same wrong. Ruth Warrick and J. Carroll Naish are in the cast.

Dual Role.

Playing a role that smacks of the film version of "The Chocolate Soldier," with the exception that its the wife instead of the husband who tests the mate's faithfulness by portraying a glamorous rival, Greta Garbo is up to a new bag of tricks in "Two-Faced Woman," showing at the Madison. As the instructress at a skiing lodge and her supposed twin sister, Garbo and Melvyn Douglas as a leading man. Constance Bennett has the role of the "other woman," and Roland Young is also cast. "Dr. Kildare's Victory," introduces a newcomer, Ann Ayars, with Lionel Barrymore and Lew Ayres.

Detective Comedy.

"Shadow of the Thin Man," with Myrna Loy and William Powell continues at the Ritz. Powell appears in his usual "Thin Man" role of the debonair detective who is aided by a charming wife in solving murder mysteries. Barry Nelson and Donna Reed are also cast. Jane Withers in "Small Town Deb," is the second picture.

Comedy Drama.

The story of a pampered young man with no understanding of his wife's medical career is told in the comedy, "You Belong To Me," co-starring Henry Fonda and Barbara Stanwyck, at the Park. The doctor meets the idle young man at a winter resort and finds herself with a husband instead of a patient at the end of her vacation. Edward Buchanan is in the cast. "Week-End For Three," with Dennis O'Keefe and Jane Wyatt, is the second attraction.

TIRE RATIONING SHRINKS COUNTY FUND FOR ROADS

Engineer Estimates Richland Revenue Will Decline About $20,000 This Year.

Richland county will lose nearly $20,000 of its road funds this year and approximately $57,000 next year as the result of the tire rationing program and the ban on new car sales, County Engineer Howard Sword estimated today.

He based his estimate on figures compiled by the state highway department planning survey which placed the revenue loss at nine per cent this year, 26 per cent in 1943, and 44 per cent in 1944.

Should the war and the accompanying curtailments continue through 1945, the road and bridge funds from gas tax and auto license revenue will be reduced to 39 per cent of the 1941 figure, the highway survey showed.

The county last year received $220,000 from the state for road and bridge construction and maintenance. The engineer sets his budget to comply with the amount the county expects to receive from the gas tax and auto license fees. Any expenditure above that must be paid by the county, itself.

Sword said he would plan his highway program during the war period with the estimated revenue cuts in mind.

He pointed out that virtually all new construction will be eliminated so that roads can be maintained for the safety of motorists and bridges can be strengthened on secondary roads if traffic should be diverted to them to leave main highways open for troop movements and hauling of war materials.

The probable highway revenue cut for this year was placed at only nine per cent since tires on most cars probably will last throughout the year and motorists will continue to buy gasoline as long as they can use their cars.

"The Authority on Authorities"

FREAKS BEGET FREAKS

If you indulge a taste for queer bidding, landing you in bizarre contracts, you are likely to find yourself face to face with grotesque playing problems. This is brought out frequently by strained efforts of duplicate players to get scores different from those obtained by the rest of the competitors, in their desire to shoot for top scores. The problems of play which finally develop may call for moves you do not expect to see ordinarily, some of which are odd in the extreme.

South violated an almost sacred rule of No Trump bidding, to avoid that declaration when you lack a couple of cards of your partner's suit, but with stoppers in hearts and clubs, plus the solid spades, he decided to make a crazy shot, especially since honors do not count in match-play duplicates.

West led his heart K and, seeing his partner's J drop, decided he would not set up the possible game trick for South by leading the suit again. He switched to the surprise lead of the club J. East did not want to advertise the whole club story to South, so put on the 7 and the declarer won with the Q, convinced that West would not have led the suit with less than five cards and that East therefore probably had the singleton K left.

Now for some funny play, superinduced by sound card reading. Five spades brought from West discards of two hearts and three diamonds. That made six tricks. If the club A were now played, dropping the K, West could then run the setting tricks. So South deliberately led a low club, letting the singleton K win. East had to return a diamond to the cummy, where three tricks were taken to make game. The 10 having been East's lead, he had the Q-3 left. So the 6 was fed to the Q and the 5 scored an extra trick. Just imagine having to let a singleton K win intentionally, and making an extra trick by doing so.

HOROSCOPE

For Wednesday, Feb. 11.

A difficult day in many phases is read from a series of adverse configurations. Many obstacles, disappointments, frustrations and defeats are possible, even though indomitable will be brought to bear on the most tenacious situations. It would be well to postpone all major operations until more benefic auguries rule. In fact this may be required because of a debilitated state of body and mind, which may be morbid, melancholy and not able to behold the silver lining. So resort to fortitude, philosophy and courage.

Those whose birthday it is are enjoined to try to take a space of relaxtion and diversion, if possible, since the auguries show many forms of defeat and frustration. There are divers obstacles, limitations, and stagnations to cope with, the major impediment probably being a lowered state of the health, with its mental depression and spiritual obliquity. The physical condition of those near and dear may also cause grave concern. Under all circumstances rigidly avoid intriguing, treacherous and sinister entanglements.

A child born on this day should be trained to a rational and philosophic, as well as spiritual and optimistic, outlook upon life, since it may meet vicissitudes of various aspects in its life.

DAUGHTER BORN

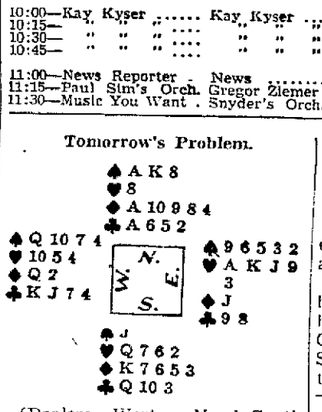
Tomorrow's Problem.



(Dealer: West. North-South vulnerable.)

If East takes the heart lead, switches to a club, the J being allowed to win the 10, a second heart is led to the A and the club 8 returned, how should South then play in an effort to make an extra trick at 3-No Trumps?

NEW FORD TRACTORS
Dickerson Bros.—140 N. Main (D-tf)

JOHN DEERE "CC" CULTIVATOR No end to its usefulness. Today experienced farmers are using it to eradicate profit-stealing weed pests. In addition they are using it for preparing seed beds; summer fallowing; breaking up of old sod; cultivating alfalfa, orchards and certain row crops; and many other jobs. The "CC" cultivator has what it takes to rid your fields or farm of every weed, and it's more than a weed killer. "It's tops as a tillage implement". 6½ ft. wide, has power lift for tractor seat operation. See it on our floor.

MARKET STILL DEPRESSED BY NEWS OF WAR

But Sales Urgency Lacking as Traders Wait More Far East Tidings.

(By Associated Press)

NEW YORK—The stock market today remained more or less depressed by the war news but, as in the previous session, selling urgency was lacking.

DuPont was an isolated soft spot, falling more than 2 points to a new bottom since 1938.

In the backward class were U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, Crucible, General Motors, Chrysler, International Harvester, Douglas Aircraft, Eastman Kodak and J. C. Penney.

The plight of Singapore persisted as the principal cloud on speculative and investment sentiment, brokers said. Many good earnings statements served as props for scattered issues but were pretty well ignored by the market as a whole.

Financial quarters saw further confirmation of the impact of mounting taxes on corporate profits in the preliminary summary of crucible steel. While the company for 1941 estimated net per share of $12.95 against $10.24 the year before, federal income and excess profits tax provisions amounted to $14,797,787 compared with $3,636,193 for 1940. Sales increased 64.4 per cent to $127,753,667 from $77,689,477 in the preceding year.

spreading across Batan peninsula, where MacArthur's lines are believed to extend for about 15 miles from the China sea to Manila bay, a war department informant said Japanese planes were carrying the brunt of the attack thus far.

The Japanese planes are aided—at MacArthur's rear behind the 4,500-foot Marivelos mountains—by Japanese artillery batteries around the fallen U. S. naval base of Cavite. Those guns are trying to blast the American island forts at the entrance to Manila bay.

For four days the Japanese guns have been loosing their shells against Corregidor fortress and Forts Hughes, Drum and Frank, but apparently without success. MacArthur has reported the destruction of several of the enemy big siege gun batteries.
